

CELEBRATING STUDENTS

The next generation of stylists has already begun to make its mark on the industry, and the future looks gorgeous. These three student standouts have more than earned their admiration.

Inspiration: Madison Pizer, a student at The Temple, a Paul Mitchell Partner School in Frederick, Maryland, found inspiration in Mother Earth when creating her striking look. “The muted rainbow tones symbolize all that is bright on our beloved planet, while the light flowers and dewy makeup represent life and radiance,” she explains.

What made her pursue professional beauty? The beauty industry combines Pizer’s love of art (particularly Claude Monet, Édouard Manet and Pierre-Auguste Renoir) with her desire to help others. “I absolutely adore making someone feel beautiful and transformed,” says Pizer. “There’s no better feeling in this world than making someone else’s day.”

Inspiration: Edgy meets professional in Abigail Dollard’s look. Dollard, who attends the Eric Fisher Academy in Wichita, Kansas, had the privilege of working on the style alongside Fisher, the academy’s founder. Dollard relied on the hair look to showcase her model’s fun personality, which is juxtaposed against clothes that mean business. “When it came to a color scheme, we opted for the ‘less is more’ approach,” she points out. “We used the model’s positioning against the white background to create strong shapes.”

What made her pursue professional beauty? A fascination with behind-the-scenes looks coupled with a love of making others feel good led Dollard down the pro-beauty path. “My admiration for others’ ability to create characters and images pushed me to explore my own work,” she shares.

TOP: HAIR AND MAKEUP: MADISON PIZER; PHOTOGRAPHER: SERENA RUSSELL; SCHOOL: THE TEMPLE, A PAUL MITCHELL PARTNER SCHOOL, FREDERICK, MARYLAND; BOTTOM: HAIR: ABIGAIL DOLLARD; MAKEUP: CINDY PRICE AND VICTORIA ESPARZA; PHOTO: ERIC FISHER; SCHOOL: ERIC FISHER ACADEMY, WICHITA, KANSAS